

To Whom It May Concern:

This is pretty sad that you are trying to get money for the kids who had died. Why can't you let it rest because it is sad on what matter when people die? It is even sadder when family and friends try to keep things going and not letting things just rest. People are getting sick of hearing about this matter it happens all over and no one has done what you all are doing. That is what cemetery is for because no one else wants to pay for this and keep it going. It is time to start healing and remember the ones that were lost in your hearts. Because there are a few of you who are Christians and know better that to be carrying on this way. Who do you think your loved ones would be saying to this.

This was really sad and no one wants something like that to happen but you are not the only ones that had something like this happen. There is thousand of family like you and they are healing and moving on. Unless you all are trying to have the media all back up here and doing things they should not be doing. This is a small town and time to start moving forward and not backwards.

There are so many people praying for the families and want you all to start healing and feeling whole again and not just sitting in the same spot and doing nothing. It is always hard to lose someone but there is always a reason for what happens and maybe it is time to start looking to God for the answers. You are not the only ones going through something like this and time to start forgiving and having peace in yourselves and with the world.

These children were not angels because we will never find out what really happen and just maybe they all had something to do with it. When are you going to let everyone start healing in this town? Because it needs to start somewhere now.

Thanks
